MARKET REVIEW

The tax-exempt municipal bond market defied expectations in the first quarter of 2018. Amid uncertainty of pending tax reform, the last two months of 2017 saw record levels of supply as issuers rushed to the market for fear of losing access to the tax-exempt market. Entering 2018, investors thus expected light municipal bond issuance alongside strong demand from higher-tax-bracket individuals still attracted to tax-free investment income, especially given the elimination or limitation of the deduction of the state income tax. Anticipated outperformance by the municipal market in this scenario, however, did not materialize. Indeed, the first quarter saw just $62 billion in issuance, which was down 32% versus the year before and demand by retail investors for bonds in high tax states was consistent; but dealers, heavy with inventory overhang, were met with selling pressure from banks and insurance companies. Rising rates and moderate demand were not enough to overcome a favorable technical position.

PERFORMANCE

Yields rose on all maturities with the 10-year increasing the most at 44 basis points; the 2-year increased 9 basis points and the 30-year increased 41 basis points. As a result of the steepening municipal yield curve, only the 1-year and 3-year Bond Indices returned positive performance while the 10-year Bond Index posted the worst performance (-1.61%) across the maturity spectrum. As a measure of the broader municipal market, the Bloomberg Barclays Municipal Bond Index returned -1.11% for the first quarter of 2018, the worst first quarter since 1996. The Revenue Index (-1.19%) and the General

Obligations Index (-1.20%) posted similar negative returns as the education, transportation, and special tax sectors posted negative returns in excess of 1.00%. The Baa Index returned -1.00% and the AAA Index was slightly lower at -1.19%.

The Fund underperformed the Bloomberg Barclays Short Municipal Bond Index by 26 basis points, largely a result of the Fund's exposure to A-rated 7-year Transportation Bonds and low-coupon, 3-year put bonds. The Fund's allocation to cash, notes, and 1-year paper was additive to performance while exposure to the 7-year maturity bucket was a detriment.

CURRENT STRATEGY

The average maturity of the Fund shortened from 3 years to 2.2 years, but maintains its defensive profile. The Fund continues to be underweight the 3- and 5-year areas, in comparison to the Bloomberg Barclays Short Muni Index, while overweight the less-than-1-year and 6- to 8-year areas. There were no significant changes to the credit profile as the Fund maintains its high quality bias. In line with our investment thesis, the Fund remains overweight Transportation and Special Tax while underweight State and Local General Obligations (GOs).

OUTLOOK

As we enter the second quarter, we are optimistic on the tax-exempt asset class. Demand is still positive for tax-free bonds. The demand/supply dynamic may change in the second quarter as seasonal factors boost demand as more money comes due to investors. The absence of institutional buyers may increase volatility and credit spreads may widen, both of which play to our strength of identifying and taking advantage of inefficiencies.
