MARKET REVIEW

The high yield sector posted a positive return in the fourth quarter, but it was the weakest quarter of 2017. The quarterly return of 0.47% brought the year-to-date return to 7.50%, as measured by the Bloomberg Barclays High Yield Index. By credit quality, BBs (+0.39%) and Bs (+0.36%) had similar returns while CCCs outperformed (1.02%). Energy (+1.98%), boosted by rising oil prices, was a leader on a sector industry basis, while Telecommunications (-2.32%) and Retail (-0.63%) lagged.

Gross issuance for the quarter was $72.5 billion, the lowest of the year. For 2017, issuance was $320 billion compared to $286 billion in 2016. Net issuance, however, was only $120 billion, the lowest level since 2011 ($110 billion). In terms of flows, 2017 saw outflows of $20.3 billion compared to inflows of $9.6 billion in 2016. ETFs, however, had inflows of $1.5 billion for 2017. Trading volumes have generally been good at $12 billion for the year, and dealer inventories at year end were about $5 billion. Overall, technical conditions for high yield are favorable with flexible supply able to adjust to modest demand.

Fundamentals for the high yield issuer universe continue to improve as evidenced by favorable year-over-year metrics for revenue and EBITDA growth, interest coverage, and leverage. The default rate has been creeping up slightly but reflects a number of large capitalization structures that were anticipated to default and were already priced into the market. The fundamental backdrop provides a good tailwind for high yield in spite of valuations that are close to post-Financial Crisis tights.

PERFORMANCE

The Fund's 1.25% return was 77 basis points ahead of the 0.47% return of the Bloomberg Barclays High Yield Index. The outperformance was due to the Fund's underweighting in telecommunications, especially wireline, and an overweighting in energy, as well as favorable security selection in healthcare and finance. In addition, specific energy companies gained from the strengthening in oil prices and a long held gaming issue benefited from the final completion of a lengthy restructuring. As wireline issuers sold off mid-quarter, we took advantage of mispricing, added to positions, and profited when prices recovered. Partially offsetting these positive factors was unfavorable security selection in retail.

CURRENT STRATEGY

During the quarter, we again took the opportunity to reduce higher yielding CCC positions as prices rose and bonds hit our price targets. Since the beginning of 2017, CCC exposure is down more than 10%. The allocation to specific energy companies with substantial links to oil price volatility was reduced and a significant position in a long held finance issuer was eliminated at a profit after the company announced it was for sale. Additionally, the allocation to one of the more levered hospital operators was reduced. Proceeds were reinvested in a number of higher quality finance, healthcare and lower-beta energy issuers.

OUTLOOK

The potential for tightening is limited at current valuation levels. In this environment, we believe that playing defense is the most prudent course of action and we have positioned our portfolios accordingly, which includes an upgrade in quality. At the same time, we will take advantage of opportunities as they arise, such as price volatility or situations where an individual credit brings down an entire sector. The economy nonetheless continues to improve and issuer fundamentals are positive. As investors keep up their search for yield in a still-low interest rate environment, we think that a mid-single-digit return is a reasonable expectation for 2018.

Index: The Bloomberg Barclays U.S. Corporate High Yield Bond Index measures fixed rate non-investment grade debt securities of U.S. corporations, calculated on a total return basis. The index is unmanaged, its returns do not reflect any fees, expenses, or sales charges, and is not available for direct investment.

Notes on Risk: Bonds: Offer a relatively stable level of income, although bond prices will fluctuate providing the potential for principal gain or loss. Intermediate-term, higher-quality bonds generally offer less risk than longer-term bonds and a lower rate of return. Generally, a fund's fixed income securities will decrease in value if interest rates rise and vice versa. High Yield-High Risk Fixed Income Securities: There is a greater level of credit risk and price volatility involved with high yield securities than investment grade securities. Foreign & Emerging Markets: Investing internationally, especially in emerging markets, involves additional risks such as currency, political, accounting, economic, and market risk. Prospectus: For additional information on risks, please see the fund's prospectus.
